PROGRAMME OBJECTIVE

The MPhil Programmes in Development Studies is multi-disciplinary in nature, and designed to provide an understanding of various perspectives on development issues, through rigorous coursework and guided research. The perspectives are drawn from different disciplines, with a strong emphasis on the classics in social sciences and humanities. Students are expected to acquire adequate analytical skills to pursue research-oriented and service-based career in development studies in academia, administration, media, non-government and corporate organisations. The curriculum emphasises a heterodox perspective on social science paradigms and the methodological underpinnings of social science research. The strength of the course particularly lies in the balance it maintains between theory and hands-on training on tools of analysis, both quantitative and qualitative.

PROGRAMME ADMINISTRATION

MPhil Programme in Development Studies is a full time programme and the degree is conferred by the University of Calcutta. The programme conforms to the pattern of the existing MPhil programmes offered by the University. The overall administration of the programme is run under the joint auspices of the IDSK and the Department of Economics, University of Calcutta as per the Memorandum of Understanding between the University of Calcutta and IDSK. The teaching faculty mainly consists of the IDSK faculty and the faculty from University of Calcutta. Eminent academicians from other institutions are also invited as guest faculty.

PROGRAMME STRUCTURE

The duration of the entire programme is two years equally divided between coursework and guided research for writing dissertation. The first year of coursework is further divided into two halves. The first half deals with the core courses, which all the students must go through, and the second deals with the specialisation courses offered in some select disciplines. The specialisation courses, irrespective of the disciplinary area, will have a strong emphasis on development-oriented topics. This part of the course work is expected to help the students to identify topics for dissertation. The second year of the course is devoted for dissertation and term papers. So far, ten batches of students have completed the programme. The eleventh batch (2016-2018) students are currently undergoing their coursework. The admission announcement is now being made for the twelfth batch (2018-2020).

COURSE CURRICULUM

Paper I: Perspectives on Development Studies (compulsory for all students) 50 marks

Group A: Development Economics

Group A starts with the 'goals of development' and the philosophical foundations of alternative concepts of well-being – from opulence to human development. It then traces the evolution of development thinking focusing on the contributions of classical economists as pioneers of development thinking and contrasting them with the emphasis of neo-classical economics on allocative efficiency. It emphasizes understanding of the contemporary economy in the historical context. In the process it deals with the role of the market, the state, and alternative institutions in economic development.

Group B: Perspectives on Economic Development in other Social Sciences

Group B focuses on select sociological perspectives on economic development. Attention will be paid to sociologists’ insights into markets (Weber, Granovetter, Bourdieu), political scientists’ understanding of the role of the state in the economy (Marx, Weber, Tilly, Skocpol) and the related question of ‘manufacturing consent’ through religious institutions, education, use of new technologies, etc. (Gramsci, Durkheim).

Paper II: Research Methodology (compulsory for all students)

50 marks

This paper is a combination of broader methodological questions in social science research and the qualitative and quantitative methods that an applied researcher in social sciences may need. The paper is divided into two groups.

Group A: Methodological Approaches in Development Research

Group A introduces various methodological positions, such as positivism, empiricism and various post-positivist trends in methodological thinking. It also introduces various qualitative research methods and tools in understanding social reality.

Group B: Quantitative Methods

Group B introduces basic quantitative techniques with a special emphasis on exploratory data analysis which proves to be useful in several social science disciplines.

Paper III & IV: Specialization Course Modules

50+50 marks

Each student is to specialize in any one of the areas of economics, history, regional development, sociology and political science and an MPhil degree would be awarded with specialization in respective subject. However, in some years, some of the courses may not be on offer. The specialisation courses, irrespective of the disciplinary area, will have a strong emphasis on development-oriented subjects.
