Research Programme in Development Studies (RPDS)

About IDSK

IDSK is an autonomous centre of excellence in social sciences, fully funded by the Government of West Bengal. It was established in 2002 as a registered society with a governing body comprising eminent scholars and government representatives. The Indian Council of Social Science Research (ICSSR) recognised IDSK under the 'New Category of ICSSR recognised Institutes'. IDSK is devoted to advanced academic research and informed policy advice in the areas of education, health, gender, employment, technology, communication, natural resource governance, population displacement, public history, and economic development. The Institute is committed to dissemination of its research findings through scientific publications, public reports, workshops, seminars, publications in the media, and other public counselling and education programmes. IDSK conducted MPhil in Development Studies since 2006 and has been conducting PhD in Development Studies since 2016, under the auspices of the University of Calcutta. During the twenty-two years of its existence, IDSK has made its mark in the world of research in social sciences. It has actively collaborated with the departments of history, economics, political science, philosophy, and business management, Ballygunge Science College, Centre for Urban Economic Studies, Women's Studies Research Centre and Centre for Social Sciences and Humanities of the University of Calcutta. IDSK has also actively collaborated with such other institutions as Monash University, University of Melbourne, University of Geneva, University of Rome "La Sapienza", Indira Gandhi Institute of Development Research, and others. The Institute regularly organises research training programmes for young scholars, often in collaboration with other academic institutions. The University Grants Commission sponsored the setting up of the Rabindranath Tagore Centre for Human Development Studies (RTCHDS) under the auspices of the IDSK through the University of Calcutta. The academic programmes of the Centre included organizing seminars, supporting doctoral research, hosting post-doctoral fellows and visiting academics at various levels.

Development Studies as a Field of Research

Development research is a field that seeks to analyse the various aspects of social, economic, political and ecological change by integrating knowledge from multiple academic disciplines such as economics, sociology, political sciences, anthropology, history, geography, and demography. Leading universities in the world offer doctoral programmes in Development Studies.

About the Course

The Research Programme in Development Studies (RPDS) is a nine-month course that aims to introduce tools and techniques of development studies research to students who have completed their masters. It combines rigorous course work with guided research. The perspectives are drawn from different disciplines, with a strong emphasis on the classics in social sciences and humanities. The purpose of the course is to encourage the students to engage with the issues of development studies, from the vantage point of critical social science research. The strength of the course lies in the balance it maintains between critical theory, in-depth training in qualitative and quantitative research methods, and guided research. It will sharpen the research aptitude of the students and serve as a bridge course between Masters and PhD programme. The course will be conducted by IDSK and the degree will be given by IDSK.
